FORMULA FORD FESTIVAL, BRANDS HATCH

October 19-21 (to be confirmed)

YOU WANT proof that Formula Ford is back after a few years in decline? Just take a look at last year's Festival. There was controversy when Nick Tandy lost his on-the-road victory as a result of his puzzling decision to make up some places under the safety car, a shock as unheralded outsider Richard Tannahill claimed victory, and some high-profile casualties as the likes of national champion Nathan Freke crashed out. Expect more of the same in 2007 as the Duratec era enters its second season and Formula Ford, which turns 40 this year, continues to reverse the decline that once threatened its very existence. Also expect a packed support bill, including the well-supported Festival for the old-style Kent Formula Ford cars.
